HISTORY

CARLO ABARTH LOVED TO DEFINE HIMSELF AS A CREATOR OF "ELABORATED AND NOT PREPARED" CARS.

Differentiation was key to success.
Carlo Abarth wanted to capture the imagination and desires of a wider audience.

He therefore started off selling exhaust systems and developing performance upgrade kits, having the possibility of working side by side with other brands and expanding his domain.

His special kits will become widely known, thanks to the unique possibility of upgrading power, boosting speed and reaching formidable levels of performance compared to other standard models.

THE BEGIN

THE RECOGNITION

THE COLLABORATION

THE FUTURE

THE BEGIN

Carlo Abarth started out designing and producing accessories to improve car performance and characteristics, which led to the first product of this original range: a transformation kit for the Fiat 600 gearshift system, which gave Carlo an excellent opportunity to demonstrate his great ability in elaborating cars. The “750 GT”, a small sports car, became the starting point of Abarth reworked cars.

THE RECOGNITION

What really gave the Scorpion brand it's spunk and recognition though were the exhaust systems, powerful sound systems linked to widely improved performances, commercialized for the rework of several cars of automakers like Fiat, Alfa Romeo, Lancia, SIMCA and Porsche.

THE COLLABORATION

It is said that, originally not knowing how much to price exhaust systems, Carlo Abarth decided to sell them based on their weight: 1.000 lira/kg.
Carlo Abarth was also chosen by “Ferry” Porsche to “elaborate” two of his personal cars and commence a working collaboration with Cisitalia as organizational racing responsible for an ambitious sports project.

This experience also allowed Abarth to get in professional contact with several personalities of the automotive industry, such as Giovanni Savonuzzi, Rudolf Hruska, Piero Taruffi and Tazio Nuvolari.

THE FUTURE

When Cisitialia failed, Abarth received as payment its racing department used cars along with crates containing spare parts and other materials. Little did he know that in those crates success and affirmation would open the doors to the industrial fortune of the future Abarth & C.
